Genoa, May 29, N. S.

LETTERS from Nice of the 24th Inſtant ſay, that frequent Councils are held by Don Philip and the General Officers, the Reſult of which were kept ſecret. And that a Fray had happened lately near that City, between a Regiment of Spaniards and a Battalion of French: The Occaſion was, A French Officer being found murdered near the Place where ſome Spaniſh Officers were quartered, the French ſeized the Standards of the Spaniſh Regiment, which brought on a Skirmiſh, wherein ſeveral were killed and wounded on both Sides.

Venice, June 4, N. S. Prince Lobcowitz has ſent General Neuhaus with a Detachment of 2000 Men towards St. Sebaſtian and Bobbio, to obſerve the Motions of the Enemy, and propoſes advancing with the main Body of the Army nearer to Tortona, that he may be at Hand to join the King of Sardinia. The Spaniards and Neapolitans under M. de Gages, who are reduced to 14,000 Men, continue ſtill in the Neighbourhood of the City of Genoa; from whence we learn, that the Regulations made by the King of Sardinia, to prevent the carrying Proviſions out of his Dominions, from which Place the State of Genoa is chiefly ſupplied, and the Vigilance of the Engliſh Fleet upon the Coaſts, has occaſioned a great Scarcity both in the Army and City. The Engliſh Squadron, commanded by Capt. Ambroſe, has done very effectual Service in retarding the Operations of Don Philip's Army; for upon receiving Intelligence that the Enemy's Horſe had Orders to march the 15th of May from Nice to Villa Franca, to join their Infantry at Oniglia and Albenga, and that M. Delage, with three Sail of Men of War, was at Villa Franca, expecting to be joined by four Sail from Toulon, and eleven Gallies from Marſeilles, in order to proceed with the Tranſports laden with Artillery and Proviſions, he came to an Anchor the 7th at St. Remo, and ſtationed his Ships within Musket Shot of the Shore, at three different Paſſes, ſo as to prevent the Paſſing of the Convoy; upon which Orders were ſent to the Troops to continue where they were, and for Part of the Cavalry to repaſs the Var, there being no Forage for the Horſe in the Valley of Nice. Their Infantry likewiſe ſuffers greatly for Want of Proviſions, having no Subſiſtance but what is carried to them daily upon Mules, which by Reaſon of the Stationing of the Engliſh Ships, are obliged to take another Road by the Back of the Mountains, which prolong their Journey eight Days, and is only paſſable for Mules with the greateſt Difficulty. Marſhal Maillebois's Army is ſaid to be 40,000; but as he muſt wait for the Melting of the Snow in the Mountains, he cannot poſſibly act till the End of this Month, or the Beginning of next.

Extract of a Letter from a Saxon General Officer, dated from the Camp at Slatin near Jaromitz in Bohemia, June 8, N. S.

The Combined Army of Auſtrians and Saxons have been retreating, till To-day they halt, ever ſince the unfortunate Battle which was fought on the 4th Inſtant near Strigau in Sileſia, between them and the Pruſſians. The Royal Regiment of Saxon Cuiraſſiers was ranged, on the Day of Battle, in the left Wing, next to the Auſtrian Troops that joined them; and it happened in the Engagement, that two Pruſſian Squadrons, which attacked the Auſtrians that were on the Right Hand of the Body Squadron of the above Regiment, were repulſed by them in ſuch a Manner, that they were got juſt upon the very Back of the ſaid Body Squadron, of which the Lieutenant Colonel gave immediate Notice to the Colonel, adviſing him at the ſame Time to wheel about, and endeavour to prevent the great Loſs and Danger they were like to undergo: The Colonel approved of his Advice, and they were ſcarce come about, before the Pruſſians preſſed upon them, being driven by the Auſtrians. The Colonel fell immediately by a Piſtol Shot; after which the Fight was obſtinate; and of the Pruſſians, who were taken to be Gendarmes, ſcarce half eſcaped, and thoſe much wounded. There was hardly Time to diſpoſe the ſaid Body Squadron, before it was attacked again by another Pruſſian Squadron, which was ſaid to be Carabineers: Theſe made great Efforts for the Standard and Kettle Drums, as the Squadron was already very weak; but the Bravery of the Officers, and of ſome under Officers, and private Men, helped the Lieutenant Colonel, who had taken the Command after the Colonel fell, to preſerve them. When this Attack was over, and the Pruſſian Squadron repulſed, the Lieutenant Colonel ſcarcely found 30 Men left by him, and ſeeing ſome of the Saxon Troops by a little Grove on the left Wing, he went to join them, and found there the Lieutenant Colonel of the Haudring Regiment, who had but a few more Men than himſelf. While they were there, two Captains, two Lieutenants, and 15 Men, with the Standard of the other Squadron of the ſaid Royal Regiment of Saxon Cuiraſſiers, came and told them that their Commander was much wounded, and the whole Squadron, except themſelves, diſperſed. After this, the ſaid Body Squadron was attacked a third Time by a Squadron of Pruſſian Dragoons, ſuppoſed to be the Mullendorff, and were ſo fortunate as to repulſe them likewiſe; but were by this Attack ſeparated from the Haudring Troops. Hereupon, ſeeing no more of the Auſtrian or Saxon Cavalry on the Field of Battle, and that the Pruſſians were purſuing them to the Village on the Right; the Lieutenant Colonel, finding he had but few Men left, in order to ſave the Standard and Kettle Drums, prudently retreated on the Left Side of the ſaid Village. They

They were no ſooner got on the other Side of it, but a great Number of Pruſſians were falling on them, from which they eſcaped, by a ſmall Career, to the Rutowski Regiment of Light Horſe; and from thence to another Village, where they found Colonel Haudring with ſome of the Saxon Cavalry: They then made together about a hundred Men, and when the two Battalions of Grenadiers, and the Rutowski Regiment of Light Horſe, were come up to them, they formed and ſupported each other's Retreat, under ſeveral Attacks of the Pruſſian Huſſars, as far as Bultenhayn, two Miles from the Field of Battle, and in that Poſition joined the Army the ſame Evening by Abtraichenau. In ſhort, the extraordinary Bravery and Conduct of the Lieutenant Colonel, the Captains, and Subaltern Officers, and of the under Officers and private Men of the ſaid Body Squadron, who did their Duty as excellent Officers and brave Soldiers, was ſuch, that the Duke of Weiſſenfels has ordered a Relation of their Behaviour to be drawn up and delivered to him.

Mentz, June 10, N. S. The French pretend that the Prince of Conti has received conſiderable Reinforcements, and that his Army, when together, will conſiſt of 60 or 70,000 Men. We have Advice indeed, that one Regiment is arrived at Worms, but upon the Whole, we cannot here make them amount to above forty, or at moſt five and forty Thouſand Men. The French have taken Poſſeſſion of Hoecht with a Small Party, and they have ſtill one free Company in Konigſtein, but it is expected they will very ſoon retire from thoſe Places.

Bonn, June 14, N. S. His Highneſs the Elector of Cologne has ſent M. de Francken-Sierſtorff as his Ambaſſador at the Diet of Election; and alſo the Baron de Roll his Maſter of the Horſe to Vienna, as well to declare on his Part, that he acknowledges the Validity of the Vote of Bohemia in the Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, as to offer his own Vote to the Great Duke of Tuſcany, for chuſing him High Emperor. His Electoral Highneſs has likewiſe ordered his Miniſters at London and the Hague to communicate the above Reſolution to the reſpective Miniſters of each Court; and to repeat his Aſſurances of his conſtant Intention to act in perfect Concert with them for the Good of the Common Cauſe.
